Geology. Laysan is the second largest single landmass in the Northwestern Hawaiian Islands, after Sand Island at Midway Atoll. Laysan was created by coral growth and geologic upshift. The fringing reefs surrounding the island cover about 735 acres (2.97 km²). Lake Laysan, the 100 acres (0.40 km²), brown, hypersaline lake in the island's interior, has varied in depth over the decades.
